Patriece Thompson

Director, Community & Citizenship
Turner Construction

Patriece Thompson brings over a decade of experience in business development and community engagement.

As director of community and citizenship at Turner Construction in Pittsburgh, she champions underrepresented business enterprises and collaborates with senior leaders to drive growth through strategic partnerships. Her career includes roles at the Greater Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce, PA Economy League, and Pittsburgh Regional Alliance, where she fostered key relationships with government and business leaders.

A graduate of California University of Pennsylvania (bachelor of science degree) and Point Park University (master of business administration degree), Patriece is also an alumna of TALI at Carnegie Mellon and Leadership Pittsburgh. Patriece serves as commissioner for the Governor's Advisory Commission on African American Affairs and chairs the Emerging Contractors Development Committee for the Master Builders Association of Western PA. She is active on several boards, including the Vice Chair Life's Works of Western Pennsylvania and Three Rivers Business Alliance, and has earned honors like the 40 Under 40 and Women of Influence awards. Outside work, Patriece enjoys working out, community service, and cheering for the Pittsburgh Steelers.
